Dear Sirs,

It is time to wrap up this mess that Janet Reno's bunch started at the Justice Department. Microsoft has already agreed to hide its Internet Explorer icon from the desktop, which was the main objection I believe most of us had about the Windows program.

Competition is just that, and Netscape, which used to be a good browser, just hasn't been able to keep pace -- or hasn't tried. Also, AOL's taking over Netscape should have gotten it over the hump. Let's get this case settled!

Sincerely,
